The State Debt-The Schools. The Times puts to us the following inter-

"All that we ask consideration of is the question, Whether a State that is rich enough to spend $1,800,000 upon education is too oor to pay its creditors a reasonable part what it owes them?" We can answer very decidedly, "No. We hold that Virginia ought to pay a reasonable part of what she owes her creditorsat least twenty-odd millions out of the sum of about thirty millions ascertained by the funding bill of 1871 to be due. But the State of Virginia is a body-poli tic. The inhabitants personally pay all the taxes levied. One class of these inhabitants lost 500,000 slaves, worth say $150,000,000, by the war. Does the Times hold that it would be right to tax-those men who have siready lost so much property in order to keep that other class whose property consisted of bonds from losing anything? Suppose that both classes-bondholders as well as slaveholders-consisted altogether of Virginians now: would it be right to compel the class that lost $180,000,000 of property to pay in addition $30,000,000 to the other class? If not, how can you ask those unfortunates to tax themselves thirty-odd millions of dollars in order to pay "foreign bondholders"? The debt was based upon negroes and lands. Shall the lands pay it is that since the people pay all the taxes, and the people need the schools for the education of their children, the same people cannot save any money for the State's creditors by cutting down the number of pupils to be educated in the public schools, for the people would have to incur a still greater expense in educating their children in private schools. If the State were to take every year three hundred thousand dollars of the school fund away from the public schools and pay it as interest to the bondholders, the tax-payers would still bave to pay that sum of three hundred to meet the bondholders' committee in a spirit of conciletion it accommended that pay four bundred thousand dollars in addition for the education in private schools of the children turned out of the public schools. We take it for granted that our peighbor would not think of proposing or even suggesting that these children might be left without education. And if they are to be educated, be must agree that they

By the way, how much of the State debt does the Times think Virginia ought to undertake to pay? Perhaps it may find itself agreeing with us on that point. Of course we have no right to insist upon an answer; but if our neighbor chooses to reply we shall take it as a favor.

Mr. CLAY did the same. Mr. future. CALBOUN died before that bill was passed. How many of these northern criticasters know even these facts?

Mr. Callioun was a nullifler, but not a Government was the creation and agent of the several States, and consequently that the States had a right to disown any of its agent's acts which were by the principal considered ultra vires, or for any other reason objectionable. This was a State's trights view of the doctrine of nullification; but it was honestly entertained and candidly expressed by the great Carolinian.

Was there in his day anything strange or peculiar in that theory? It was held by all the most distinguished of the framers reason objectionable. This was a state's that many of the signers of that petition have signed another petition of a very different character. Of course Mr. Cooper did not wheedle any Jdy into signing the petition by carrying it around. He held that the Federal all the most distinguished of the framers of the Federal Constitution. For the benefit of Gornam, the Philadelphia Press, the Washington Republican, and all others concerned, we reproduce from the Code of Virginia proof positive that from the days of GEORGE WASHING-108, the president of the convention that 1 swed the Federal Constitution, up to the clearly-expressed States'-rights doctrine was to be found on the first page of the Code of Virginia. Read the following adopted by the Virginia Convention that ratified the Federal Constitution a bundred Jeurs ago: years ago:

"We, the delegates of the people of Virginis, dury elected in pursuance of a recommendation from the General Assembly, and now met in convention, having fully and treely investigated and discussed the proceedings of the Federal Convention, and being 28 well prepared as the most mature desiberation bath enabled us to decide thereon, do, in the name and in behalf of the propie of Virginia, declare and make known that the powers granted under the Federal Constitution, being derived from the people of the United States, may be resumed by them whenever the same shall be perverted to their injury or oppression."

And of course the State was to be the And of course the State was to be the judge. There is the germ of the secession doctrine and of the war between the States.
Viginia would, it is evident, never have surrendered the powers granted to the Federal Government under the Federal Constitution but for the understanding that the could if the being asked the question. " Will the South remain solid ?" replied, with some hesitation, as follows: "No, I do not think it will. Virginia

"No, I do not think it will. Virginia and Tennessee may break loose and go Republican: but as long as the old Democrats who fought through the war live and keep up their old prejudices the South is very apt to remain Democratic."

We agree with Mr. SHERMAN. The South will not remain solid. In the course of events it must divide on great economic questions. Nevertheless we can rejoice in the knowledge that it is not written that "Ohlo's favorite son " is the man destined to break it. Nor is that all. Neither Virginia nor Tennessee will cut loose nor will the general break occur until the men of SHERMAN'S stripe, whose stock in trade consists in keeping alive war prejudices, have been politically shelved or have turned their tees to the dasies.

and a very different view-the one dishonest, the other honest.

The petition was evidently framed in the spirit of conciliation it accompanied that request with a threat, and made the 120 signers say that unless you accept a reasonable proposition of compromise, of which we are to be the sole judge, we will thereafter pay our taxes in coupons. On the one hand, it was an attempt to build doze the legislative committee into submission to any proposition of settlement the agents of the bondholders might propose. On the other hand, it was a declaration of the 120 innecent signers of the petition to the bondholders that if you will stand firm and make no proposition.

the state of Virginia. BILL PRESENTED AND REFERRED. By Mr. Coltraine, of Carroll: To provide for working the public roads in Car roll county.

LOCAL OPTION IN BEDFORD, Mr. Thurman moved that the Committee on General Laws be discharged from the further consideration of the bill having for its object the repeal of the local-option law as it applies to certain magisterial districts in Bedford county, and that it be placed on the calendar.

Mr. Heaton thought this question had been forever settled, and such principles were involved that be thought it dangerous to open up the subject again, although the was willing that the entire law should be repealed and higher license-taxes be im-

Mr. Thurman said this was a case of spe cal ment and there were good reasons why the law should be repealed, which he was prepared to furnish the Senate when the subject came up for consideration. Mr. Rhea opposed the motion to dis-charge the committee. He was not willing that this proceeding, which would open up the avenue for numerous such bills, should be initiated. Mr. Thurman insisted on his motion Mr. Thurman insisted on his motion. What if other such bills did come in? If they are right and well grounded they should be brought in and passed.

The motion was lost for the want of a two-thirds vote.

ATLANTIC AND DANVILLE. Mr. Tiller informed the Senate that the louse had passed, with amendments, Sen to incorporate the Atlantic and 9 of an act to incorporate the Atlantic and Danville Narrow-Gauge Railroad Company, approved April 21, 1882, as amended by an act approved February 24, 1886; and to confer certain additional powers on said ompany.

The bill was subsequently taken up, on notion of Mr. Edmunds, and the House amendments were concurred in.

SUITS AGAINST RECEIVERS. One of the first measures reached on the calendar was the House bill to provide for bringing suits against receivers in certain cases. The bill was passed by the House in the latter part of March and brought to the Senate, where it was referred to the Committee for Courts of Justice. This committee on the 31st of that month reported it without amendment

Mr. Wickbam moved to refer to the Committee on Roads.

Mr. McCormick moved, as a substitu-

The April-Face; or, The Stub-Tailed Mule.

AN IDYL OF A RICHMOND STREET-CAR. [From the Century "Bric-a-Brac."] All up the street, at a stately pace,
The maiden came with her April-face,
And the roses I'd paid for—upon her breast
Were white as the eggs in a partridge-nest,
While behind her—the driver upon his stool Tinkled the bell of the street-car mule.

"Going to walk up the street?" I said, She graciously bowed her beautiful hea "Then I'll walk, too; 'disa lovely day'. Thus I opened the ball in my usual way, "Do you see the car behind?" inquired The April-face; "I'm a trifle tired."

I urged a walk; 'twas a useless suit; She gently waved her parachute; The stub-tailed mule stopped quick enow; I handed her in with a stately bow, And the bell rang out with a jangled quirk, As the stub-tailed mule went off with a jerk.

Three men as she entered selemnly rose, And quietly trampled their neighbor's toes; A dudish masher left his place, And edged near the girl with the April-face, Who sat on the side you'd call "the lee" (With the same sweet smile she'd sat on me). The day was lovely, mild the air; The sky, like the maiden's face, was fair; The car was full and a trife stale (Attached to the mule with the stuby tail); Yet the maiden preferred the seat she nired To the stroll with me; for I made her tired.

And new when the maiden walks the street With another's flowers, and a smile so sweet, I wave to the driver upon his stool, And stop the sub-tailled street-car mule. While I purchase a seat with half my pel; For it makes no admile tired myself.
